You need to prepare for the Preschool Language Scale-5 (PLS-5), which determines whether a child's language is delayed and whether they meet the criteria for a diagnosis of autism on the mild end of the spectrum. The PLS-5 has standardized subscales which evaluate relative ability in Language, Syntax, Vocabulary, and Pragmatics.

Looking at the report, the Receptive Language Score was in the low 80's, the Expressive Language Score was in the mid 70's, and the Total Language Score was also in the low 80's. This indicates a language delay, and therefore a need for a full PLS-5 or Reynell Developmental Language Scale assessment to see roughly where the child is (e.g.,roughly 2-3 years behind).
